Bird shaped centerpiece, Werkstatte Hagenauer
Vienna, circa 1930, brass nickel-plated, marked

Bird-shaped centerpieces were among the most popular objects Werkstatte Hagenauer Vienna produced for the export. Their designs date partly back to the 1930s, for example in very decorative vessels shaped like a heron.

In this centerpiece a highly stylized bird is artfully chased from one single sheet of brass. The bellied body lends itself to being used as an offering plate and on it the elegantly hammered decor is best visible. The vessel impresses with harmonious proportions and very elegant silhouette from the beak to the fanned tail feathers.
