decorative brass tray, Werkstatte Hagenauer
Wien, 1940s, marked

Karl Hagenauer took over the management of the Werkstatte Hagenauer Wien in the 1920s. Under his leadership, the assortment of the workshop changed and adapted to the taste of the customers of the period.

In addition to the variety of decorative objects designed by the Hagenauer brothers Karl and Franz, there are also plenty of utility items that have been refined with their unique style. These range from candleholders and hand mirrors all the way to paper knives.

Another example is this elegant, beaten brass bowl. The contrast between geometric symmetry and organic curves gives this object a lively tension.
