PULCINO ALESSANDRO PIANON VISTOSI CA. 1961

Pulcino blown-glass chick, design Alessandro Pianon, manufactured by Vetreria Vistosi Murano, ca. 1961, glass and copper wire

Alessandro Pianon was an Italian designer known for his delightful glass sculptures of "Pulcini," Italian for chicks. Born in Venice in 1931, Pianon, after his studies there, established himself in the world of mid-century art with his unique designs. He had been the artistic director at Seguso Vetri d'Arte for years when he was commissioned to design a new company logo for Vetreria Vistosi. This collaboration developed into a close business relationship and soon he had his "Pulcini" produced there. The series of "Pulcini" includes five bird sculptures in different shapes and colors. There are orange, green, yellow, turquoise, and blue versions, each balancing on thin copper wire feet. They all have one thing in common: the charming personalities of the little birds captivate the viewer.
