Soliflore Vase with brass base, Louis Comfort
Tiffany, Tiffany Studios New York, ca. 1905, signed

The Tiffany Studios New York were one of the most famous art studios in the United States around the turn of the century. Glass vases from this workshop fetch top prices in today's art market and are among the most sought-after decorative objects from around 1900. Tiffany produced art objects in almost all categories, from hand mirrors and desk sets to jewelry and glassware.

Soliflore vases with bronze or brass bases were introduced into the Tiffany's assortment around 1900 and enjoyed great popularity. Particularly noteworthy are the modern form of the brass base and its detailed execution, and the exceptionally colorful iridescence of the glass.
